New law school may also offer full-time course

Panel to seek prospective students’ views before taking a decision

By SANDRA DAVIE

Although UniSIM was set up to offer part-time degree courses, the school’s first cohort of 80 students will start in 2004, on a full-time and part-time basis.

In an interview with The Straits Times last week, revealed that the course will be run on a full-time basis.

For the first year, it had said it would run both on full-time and part-time basis.

The law school will study if the undergraduate law degree course should be running full-time ones.

From next year it will start offer part-time degree courses, taking a balanced approach.

But one of the ideas that Professor Cheong noted.

He added that Northumbria University in Newcastle.

This is run as a full legal clinic on campus.

As an example, he cited the University of Singapore.

The school’s law clinic on campus.

This is run as a full legal clinic on campus.

Besides developing students’ professional legal skills, the school’s clinic on campus.

It is targeted at mature students, with relevant background in areas such as social work and psychology.

Although UniSIM was set up to offer part-time degree courses, the school’s first cohort of 80 students will start in 2004, on a full-time and part-time basis.

For the first year, it had said it would run both on full-time and part-time basis.

The law school will study if the undergraduate law degree course should be running full-time ones.

From next year it will start offer part-time degree courses, taking a balanced approach.

But one of the ideas that Professor Cheong noted.

He added that Northumbria University in Newcastle.

This is run as a full legal clinic on campus.

As an example, he cited the University of Singapore.

The school’s law clinic on campus.

This is run as a full legal clinic on campus.

Besides developing students’ professional legal skills, the school’s clinic on campus.

It is targeted at mature students, with relevant background in areas such as social work and psychology.

Although UniSIM was set up to offer part-time degree courses, the school’s first cohort of 80 students will start in 2004, on a full-time and part-time basis.

For the first year, it had said it would run both on full-time and part-time basis.

The law school will study if the undergraduate law degree course should be running full-time ones.

From next year it will start offer part-time degree courses, taking a balanced approach.

But one of the ideas that Professor Cheong noted.

He added that Northumbria University in Newcastle.

This is run as a full legal clinic on campus.

As an example, he cited the University of Singapore.

The school’s law clinic on campus.

This is run as a full legal clinic on campus.

Besides developing students’ professional legal skills, the school’s clinic on campus.

It is targeted at mature students, with relevant background in areas such as social work and psychology.